CLOSING THE COVERAGE GAP

There are Lives on the Line

To get financial help from the Marketplace:

- A family of 3 has to make more than $20,090
- An individual has to make more than $11,770

In most states, if someone makes an income lower than these benchmarks they can still get health insurance by signing up for Medicaid.

Virginia's Current Medicaid Eligibility:

- A family of 3 has to make less than $7,656* in order for the parents to qualify
- An adult without a disability or children cannot qualify, no matter how small their income

Therefore about 200,000 Virginians don't qualify for tax credits in the Marketplace, but also don't qualify for Virginia's restrictive Medicaid program.

Closing the coverage gap means:

- more people would get early care for preventable conditions;
- the burden of medical debts on individuals and health care providers would be lessened or eliminated;
- more working parents, veterans, and students would be covered; and
- 400,000 Virginians would get access to more affordable coverage.

Last year, Kentucky, like most of Virginia's other neighboring states, decided to close its coverage gap. Their percentage of uninsured dropped to 9% and is now lower than Virginia's uninsured rate. 22,000 additional Kentuckians received cholesterol screenings last year, while over 26,000 Virginians didn't. 5,600 more Kentucky women received mammograms, and 6,800 Virginia women again missed out. Shouldn't Virginians have the same chance to get needed health care services?

If you would like Virginia to close the coverage gap and benefit from our tax dollars, contact your legislators to let them know.

DO YOU CARE ABOUT WOMEN'S WELLNESS IN VIRGINIA?

NOW YOU CAN DO SOMETHING ABOUT IT.

WOMEN'S HEALTH VIRGINIA is leading the way to improve women and girls' health and well being through education, research and collaboration.

You can be part of that effort.

Join the WHV Network. You, your organization or business can work with us to raise awareness of women & girls' wellness concerns and provide grassroots input about issues affecting your wellness and that of women and girls you know.

Use your skills. You can work on educational and research projects, special events, partnership building, office support—just about anything we do—in our office, in your community or in your home. Whether you are a professional in a health or wellness field or a person who cares about women and girls' well being, you can be part of our team. We will match your interests, skills and availability with our needs.

Attend a WHV event. You are welcome at our educational programs (our annual June conference and other workshops and webinars), and community, social and fundraising events. You can also participate in a listening session to make your voice heard on issues that concern you.
